Scientists issue urgent global warming warning: February is on course to be the hottest in the history books as the planet heats up at an 'accelerating rate'

- Global temperature is around one degree higher than the 1982-2011 average
- It is reported that every month since last May has been the hottest on record
- Scientists say natural weather-affecting phenomena is now harder to predict

Last year, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) issued a 'final warning' to world leaders.

The drive for Net Zero 'could cost households £6,000 a year' despite Rishi Sunak ditching or delaying green policies, report warns

- Rishi Sunak has already ditched or delayed several green policies
- It was previously estimated that the price tag for net zero would be £1.3 trillion
- But Civitas says it may cost up to £4.5 trillion to reach net zero by 2050

Carbonbrief

Scientists have delivered a “final warning” on the climate crisis, as rising greenhouse gas emissions push the world to the brink of irrevocable damage that only swift and drastic action can avert.

In 2023 the average global temperature breached 1.5°C

UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres called on governments to take drastic action to reduce emissions by investing in renewable energy and low-carbon technology.

Emissions continue to increase

The billionaire owned Daily Mail chooses not to use its influence to reduce emissions. They choose to undermine plans to decarbonise, and attack Net Zero. While Suella Braverman might consider this excellent journalism, global scientists and doctors don't.
